Better internet service coming to south Hancock; U.S. 69 area still waiting

Hancock residents around the Cabot area in the south east corner of the county should have access to ConnectGRADD internet by end of summer, representatives from Q-Wireless, the project's new wireless provider, told the fiscal court Tuesday morning.

ConnectGRADD already has five operating towers in the county, said Joey Randolph, Director of Sales and Marketing for Q-Wireless, and the sixth should be operational sometime this summer. There was a delay in getting new towers due to a company change.

Norlight, the original wireless provider for the project, was bought out by Windstream, a company out of Little Rock, Ark. They spun off the wireless element and sold that portion back to the original owners of Norlight, who named it Q-Wireless.

The ConnectGRADD project is intended to provide internet access in areas of seven Kentucky counties that would otherwise not have any access to the web by mounting wireless equipment on cell towers, water towers and any tall structures in the areas needing served.

ConnectGRADD currently has towers on the Lambert Schoolhouse Road water tank, about a mile east of Lewisport on Highway 60, on the Dukes water tank, in Bowling Chapel and on the Weber Town tower.

The long-awaited new wireless towers will be back on track once they finalize the company changes in July, the company said, but the delay worried at least one on the court.

"I think people are starting to believe I'm lying to them," said Magistrate Frank Estes.

The new location is an old AT&T microwave relay tower north of Fordsville that will service the Cabot area, Randolph said, but they will be adding another, just outside the county, on Friendship Road that will service the Reynolds Station area.

"This project, we've come to realize, isn't one that may ever be considered completely finished," said Randolph.

Currently there are about 300 customers in Hancock County on the service, Randolph said, and about 2650 over the seven counties.

Judge McCaslin and the court asked about getting service on State Route 69, an area that is home to many residents but lacking internet access.

"That 69 tower would help out a lot of people," said District 3 Magistrate John Mark Gray.

Randolph said the company is aware of a site on 69 and is looking into it, but considering the original funding was for 28 towers throughout the seven counties and they have stretched it to 53, they have to be very careful with which ones they choose.

"We want to make sure we're getting our money's worth and we don't want to just say, 'Oh boy, that's a good tower, whatever it takes, let's go do it,'" he said. "We want to make that economically sound."

It's not a question of us doubting that we're going to find people that want the service but lacking internet access.

Fire in stove causes family to lose home

A rural Hawesville mobile home was destroyed Wednesday night by a fire that the homeowner says started in the kitchen.

The home, located at 4787 State Route 1389, is a total loss, according to the owner, Pam Rice.

The fire started, she said, when her daughter Autumn was home with her boyfriend, Chuck Carf and her brother Damian. She turned on the stove to cook fries and something under the burner ignited, spreading to the rest of the structure and fully engulfing it, leaving only the outside walls standing.

Firefighters received the call around 10:30 p.m., according to Benny Singleton, public relations officer for Hawesville Fire Department. Both Lewisport and Hawesville fire departments responded and stayed on scene for approximately three hours.

Pam was out of town when she got the call from her son Damian and immediately came home, arriving after the blaze was put out.

"I nearly had a heart attack," she said. "My blood pressure was so high they wanted me to go to the hospital and I refused."

"It wasn't much, but it was home," she said.

"The only thing pretty much standing that's worth anything - and it ain't worth much - is the front porch," she said.

Singleton said the fire doesn't appear suspicious, but Hawesville Chief Matt Husk and Lead Investigator Rick Montague are doing a routine investigation to determine the cause.

"[The kids] feel terrible," said Rice. "They feel like they caused it but they didn't... That burner has caught on fire before. If there's anything under the burner there's been times that it would catch on fire and I'd catch it."

My kids are alive, that's all that matters... Nobody got hurt. The dog got a little singed," she said.

That dog, a Dachshound named Sable, was rescued by Autumn's boyfriend, Chuck Carf, who was staying the night.

Relay brings in $33,648; heavy wind cancels all-night stay

Hundreds of cancer survivors, supporters and family members participated in Hancock County's 2011 Relay for Life last Friday and Saturday, held on the lawn beside Hancock County High School.

This year's event featured 17 teams with a total of more than 250 team members, each raising money that will go to the American Cancer Society, according to Denna Taylor, Chairperson for Relay for Life of Hancock County. The American Cancer Society helps Hancock County Cancer victims through its Owensboro office.

While the teams did not meet their $50,000 goal this year, they did raise $36,648,80, she said, and they have until August 31 to raise more money and try to meet their goal.

"The last few years we have won an award for our per capita," said Taylor, meaning they raised a lot of money for their size.

"It seemed like our crowd was down a little bit but we actually feel like we had more survivors there than in the past," she said.

Those survivors marched in a survivor walk, making a lap around the perimeter of the event in a display of victory and celebration over their battle with the disease.

To commemorate those who fought with cancer as well as those who lost that battle, the event sold luminaries, white paper bags with a candle inside, each with the name of a friend or loved one. During a lighting ceremony all lights were turned off and the more than 500 candles were lit while the names were read aloud.

The night also featured a Relay Idol contest, a pageant, games and food sales, plus performances by the Muddy Gut Ramblers and the Moon Crickets.

Sometime around 3 a.m., right after the games finished and Zumba was about to start,

Hawesville looking at festival to mark 200th anniversary of first steamboat

This year marks the 200th anniversary of the first steamboat trip down the Ohio River in 1811 and the guest speaker at Tuesday's Hancock County Chamber of Commerce Breakfast thinks that's worth celebrating with a revived Steamboat Festival.

Chuck Parrish, a former historian with the Army Corps of Engineers in Louisville and current consultant to the Rivers Institute at Hanover College, told attendees that Hanover College is working with cities all along the Ohio to celebrate the steamboat and its importance to the growth of early American river cities.

Hawesville mayor Rita Stephens both agrees with that sentiment and has been

Travathan, Hines get eye opener experience in Joker's 'Homeland'

Refreshing. At opposite end of show-me-the-money scale for one-and-doners, find Danny Travathan and Stuart Hines. The UK football stars spent a week in Ethiopia recently visiting villages, helping distribute food, and spend time with children, give away a ball or two.

Think ... giving a poor kid a new football – magical.

Travathan said in a release, this trip was an eye opener, a reality check. (These) People have so little and are so happy for what they get. They appreciate things we take for granted like water.

About coach Joker Phillips, Mitch Barnhart and their wives ...

"I learned a lot about the people I went with and I have a different relationship with them now. I found out that they are into it for all the right reasons. I think that is the thing that really helped me and will continue to help me for the rest of my life."

Hines on taking things for granted: "We're here playing football and on scholarship. We have our school paid for, a roof over our heads and food provided for us. There are 500,000 kids living on the street in Ethiopia. (It) could have easily been one of us who ended up in a life like that."

When Phillips asked him about making the trip to his (Phillips) "home land," Hines said "I was kind of like, 'Are you kidding me?' I wondered if he was for real or if he was just joking around. He asked me if I wanted to go to his homeland, and I thought he was talking about Franklin, Kentucky."

Central to the trip was Barnhart. UK's director of athletics said, "We get to play a lot of games and do a lot of things that (media) count in Ws and Ls, but at the end of the day, our job is to educate young people and to expand their horizons and their minds and their hearts."

"It was an amazing seven or eight days. It will change your thought process and the way you look at what you have every day."

The college experience. Priceless.

Sports In Kentucky

Bob Watkins

Nowitzki(s) will receive championship rings with rocks the size of LeBron James' head band, compliments of Mark Cuban.

Closer to home, next big drama is, well, the NBA Draft next week, followed by a parade of blabbing heads and doomsday columnists dispensing wisdom about a lock-out. If the last of these happens, the What If's kick in. What if Brandon Knight had stayed? DeAndre Liggins and Terrence Jennings too.

Ah, summer time. We move along to Joke-of-the-Week – John Calipari and Kentucky work on contract extension.

When you stop laughing and UK fans stop grimacing, answer this pop quiz question: Name a college coach this side of Matt Painter (Purdue) and Brad Stevens (Butler) who honored a contract, let alone an extension?

Give up? Like a host of others before him and since, Calipari walked out on recruits at UMass and Memphis and left both schools with NCAA headaches. Contracts and extensions are as honor binding for ball coaches as a campaign promise from a politician.

Given its weak credibility, a contract extension should be rejected by Calipari. Instead, he ought use his bully pulpit to re-affirm his current commitment to UK and its (his) mission to educate and graduate student-athletes.

PELPHREY QUESTION

Fan asked last week, "...curious why you think (John) Pelphrey could be head coach at UK, say before Travis Ford? Ford has yet to be fired at any of his stops. Plus, he has more wins than Pelphrey."

Ford's climb to a Big 12 job and timing of when to job jump worked out. With Oklahoma State alum T. Boone Pickens' support, Ford be be staying in Stillwater awhile.

Pelphrey left South Alabama too soon and for the wrong job (Arkansas). He should have waited another year, even two. But, the Paintsville native landed on his feet, returning to Billy Donovan's staff at Florida. In a season or two Pelphrey will be back on the coaching carousel.

WORTH REPEATING

John Calipari's reaction to his nomination for a special achievement Emmy for helping a Lexington television station raise money for Haiti relief last year, was spot on.

"Congratulations to everyone at WKYT on (its) Emmy nomination under the category of Special Achievement Community Service for our Hoops for Haiti telethon," the UK coach said. "I'm extremely grateful to be listed among you and all the other nominees. But the real Emmy nomination goes to all the people (who) donated and made the telethon a success for the people of Haiti."

PARTING SHOT

Mitch Barnhart on visit to Ethiopia: "This was not a recruiting piece for us. It was an opportunity where, if people (student-athletes) come (to UK), we're going to try to expand these experiences. ## School Paddling - Advocates call for ending paddling in Ky. schools

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) Some advocates for children are asking for 45 school districts in Kentucky to end the use of paddling as a punishment over concerns about excessive force and overuse on students with disabilities.

Amy Swann of Kentucky Youth Advocates told the Lexington Herald-Leader that 33 percent of students paddled during the 2009-2010 school year were special education students, but only 13 percent of Kentucky's public school students receive special education.

Swann said the data prompts a worry that "some of those were indeed disciplined for behaviors that were a manifestation of their disability."

Blueprint for Kentucky's Children, a six-year plan to improve child well-being in Kentucky, calls for all school districts to stop corporal punishment. Kentucky law allows each district to decide whether to use corporal punishment.

"I believe in local control, but it shouldn't be a ZIP code lottery, where some kids get smacked and some kids don't depending upon where they live," said Terry Brooks, executive director of Kentucky Youth Advocates.

A Safe Schools Data Project shows there were 1,573 incidents of corporal punishment in Kentucky during the 2009-2010 school year. Corporal punishment has declined in Kentucky schools since 2005-2006, when more than 3,400 incidents were reported.

The Kentucky Educational Professional Standards Board, which regulates teachers, is conducting an investigation into the paddling of a 12-year-old in November in Pike County that ended with the student in an emergency room for treatment of bruises and blisters.

James Wallace said he and his wife gave permission for the Belfry Middle School principal to paddle their son for spitting on another child in a fight. He said his son has behavioral problems, but he considered what happened to his son an assault.

"I couldn't have done a dog like that," Wallace said.

Principal Matt Mercer said in an interview that he did not use excessive force and Pike County Schools personnel director Ralph Kilgore said an internal district investigation found that Mercer followed board policy on paddling.

Those policies require two witnesses to be present and parents must give written consent for the student to be paddled, Kilgore said. He also said no more than three swats are given during the paddling. "This is a non-issue for me," Mercer said Friday. "We did nothing wrong. We followed procedure to a tee. There was absolutely no abuse."

Lisa Gross, a spokeswoman for the Kentucky Department of Education, said abolishing the practice in Kentucky would require changing state law. But House Education Committee Chairman Carl Rollins, D-Midway, said he would have trouble getting a bill to ban corporal punishment out of his committee.

"While I'm not in favor of corporal punishment, I'd be hesitant to take that control away from local school boards," Rollins said.

Man pleads guilty in fatal car chase

Ky. man found, arrested hearing name on newscast

ASHLAND, Ky. (AP) Kentucky State Police say a man who had been reported missing turned up after he heard his name on a newscast and was arrested on an outstanding warrant Trooper Elliott Gollihue says 37-year-old Robert Branham showed up at Danco Fuels in Johnson County at about 1:24 p.m. EDT Sunday, more than 24 hours after he left for work in Wayne County, W.Va.

Gollihue says Branham's wife, Laura Branham, received a text message from her husband's cell phone with the message "Your man has gotten exactly what he deserves, he is at the mouth of 645, sorry for your loss" and called police.

Gollihue says Branham contacted troopers after hearing his name on a newscast. Troopers found an outstanding warrant from Boyd County.

Branham was in Big Sandy Regional Jail.

Deadly home invasion case sent to grand jury

WINCHESTER, Ky. (AP) A grand jury will hear a case in which a central Kentucky man is accused of murder and robbery during a home invasion.

Clark County Chief District Judge Earl-Ray Neal waived the case against Aaron Lewis to the grand jury Wednesday after listening to testimony during a preliminary hearing.

Winchester police Capt. James Hall testified that Lewis was charged because his story didn't match evidence in the case.

Hall said police believe Lewis and Demontez Cowherd went to the home of 29-year-old Phillip Howard and tried to rob him, but found Howard armed with a revolver. Hall said Cowherd and Howard died in a shootout and Lewis was injured.

Lewis has denied being in Winchester or knowing Cowherd, but police say cell phone records show otherwise.

CRIT LUALLEN AUDITOR OF PUBLIC ACCOUNTS

To the People of Kentucky
Honorable Steven L. Beshear, Governor
Lori H. Flanery, Secretary
Finance and Administration Cabinet
Honorable Jack B. McCaslin, Hancock County Judge/Executive
Honorable Ralph Dale Bozarth, Hancock County Sheriff
Members of the Hancock County Fiscal Court

Independent Auditor's Report

We have audited the Hancock County Sheriff's Settlement - 2009 Taxes for the period May 5, 2009 through April 15, 2010. This tax settlement is the responsibility of the Hancock County Sheriff. Our responsibility is to express an opinion on this financial statement based on our audit.

We conducted our audit in accordance with auditing standards generally accepted in the United States of America, the standards applicable to financial audits contained in Government Auditing Standards issued by the Comptroller General of the United States, and the Audit Guide for Sheriff's Tax Settlements issued by the Auditor of Public Accounts, Commonwealth of Kentucky. Those standards require that we plan and perform the audit to obtain reasonable assurance about whether the financial statement is free of material misstatement. An audit includes examining, on a test basis, evidence supporting the amounts and disclosures in the financial statement. An audit also includes assessing the accounting principles used and significant estimates made by management, as well as evaluating the overall financial statement presentation. We believe that our audit provides a reasonable basis for our opinion. As described in Note 1, the Sheriff's office prepares the financial statement in accordance with the modified cash basis, which is a comprehensive basis of accounting other than accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America.

In our opinion, the accompanying financial statement referred to above presents fairly, in all material respects, the Hancock County Sheriff's taxes charged, credited, and paid for the period May 5, 2009 through April 15, 2010, in conformity with the modified cash basis of accounting.

In accordance with Government Auditing Standards, we have also issued our report dated April 25, 2011 on our consideration of the Sheriff's internal control over financial reporting and on our tests of its compliance with certain provisions of laws, regulations, contracts and grant agreements, and other matters. The purpose of that report is to describe the scope of our testing of internal control over financial reporting and compliance and the results of that testing, and not to provide an opinion on the internal control over financial reporting or on compliance. That report is an integral part of an audit performed in accordance with Government Auditing Standards and should be considered in assessing the results of our audit.

Based on the results of our audit, we present the accompanying comment and recommendation, included herein, which discusses the following report comment:

2009-01 The Sheriff's Office Lacks Adequate Segregation Of Duties

Respectfully submitted,

Crit Luallen

Pam Rice tests to see if the porch will still hold her as she goes back to examine what remains after a fire swept through her mobile home Wednesday, June 8, 2011. Rice says the fire started when her daughter Autumn was preparing to cook fries and the stove burner ignited. “I feel like I’m out there in the world wandering around wondering what’s next,” said Rice. “I’m not planted solid like I’m used to.” The home, located at 4787 State Route 1389 is considered a complete loss.

Accident reports

Wrong turn results in wreck

A two vehicle accident Saturday afternoon 3 miles east of Lewisport left two vehicles disabled but no one injured.

Police say Jesse Baize, 17, of English, Ind., was driving west in the left lane on US 60 in a 1984 Pontiac Bonneville after passing his turn at approximately 11:40 a.m. He decided to quickly turn into Thompson Tire for directions, not noticing the 1993 Ford Ranger in the right hand lane, driven by 17-year-old William R. Chord III, of Lewisport.

The two vehicles traveled off the road to the right shoulder, striking a road sign and coming to rest just west of Roberts Lane.

Both vehicles were towed to Bob’s Garage with severe damage but neither driver was injured.

Deer cause of wreck

A vehicle swerving to miss a deer overturned Saturday, resulting in very severe damage but no injuries.

James D Roach, 22, of Lewisport, was driving a 2000

Volkswagen Jetta north on River Road and swerved to the right to miss a deer. Roach overcorrected and eventually crossed to the left of the road, rolling over one to two times before coming to rest on its roof in a corn field.

Roach was uninjured but his car was towed to Bob’s Garage with very severe damage.

Pickups tangle at Aleris

Two delivery vehicles were involved in a minor collision on the docks of Aleris Friday afternoon.

A 2008 Ford Ranger owned by Equipment Depot Ky, Inc. from Evansville was parked on the loading dock when a 2010 Dodge Ram driven by Matthew Baugh, 29, of Owensboro and owned by Fastenal Co. backed into the driver front bumper of the Ranger.

Baugh stated he misjudged the distance between the two trucks.

The Dodge sustained minor damage and the Ford sustained moderate damage, but both vehicles remained in service.

Wrong place to look at a map

An out-of-town driver looking at a map ran off the road Sunday morning one mile east of Lewisport, damaging his vehicle.

Zachary D. McReynolds, 19, from Buffalo, Mo., was driving a 1998 Chevrolet pickup on Highway 60 when he was distracted trying to read a map and ran off the side of the road, striking a fence owned by the state road department.

The vehicle sustained moderate to severe damage and was towed to Bob’s Garage.

Lightning strike starts fire, destroys home

BEREA, Ky. (AP) A central Kentucky homeowner says a lightning strike started a fire that burned his home to the ground.

Mark Dees of Berea told WLEX-TV in Lexington that the lightning struck at about 3:30 p.m. EDT Saturday while he was out, but he could see flames and smoke from a distance.

Firefighters said it appeared that lightning struck Dees’ roof and the house is total loss.

Dees said he ran into the home to save his four trapped dogs and, once the dogs were out, he gave up trying to save anything from the house.

A neighbor, Cindy Arbutnot, said the heat was so intense, it could be felt three doors down.

Dees has plans to rebuild his house on the same lot.

Special interests spend $7 million on lobbying

FRANKFORT, Ky. (AP) The Legislative Ethics Commission is reporting that special interests spent $7 million lobbying Kentucky lawmakers from January through April.

So far this year, health care has been the highest spending industry, putting $1.5 million in lobbying efforts at the state Capitol. Hospital operators accounted for about $300,000 of that. Among the biggest spenders, the Kentucky Hospital Association spent $56,000. Norton Healthcare spent $44,631. Baptist Healthcare System spent $42,800.

I saw this article by Dr. Lee Townsend, UK Extension Entomologist, in the June 7, 2011 Kentucky Pest News and thought you might find it interesting since ticks are so prevalent this year.

Full as a Tick

The American dog tick (ADT) has been particularly abundant this season. It and the lone star tick are the two problematic species in the state. Adult ADT spend the winter on the ground and are active from April through June, seeking a dog, larger mammal, or human host for a blood meal. Engorged females drop off the host and develop a batch of 4,000 to 6,500 eggs that are laid on the ground. Mortality is high so only a few will survive to the adult stage.

A tiny 6-legged larva will emerge from each egg in 3 to 4 weeks and climb on vegetation to wait for a passing small mammal, such as a mouse, for the first blood meal. Larvae can survive up to 11 months without feeding if necessary.

Engorged larvae drop to the ground, digest the meal, and molt to the nymphal stage. This process can be as short as three weeks to as long as several months. The nymphs repeat the process, often using a raccoon or opossum as the second host, before molting to the adult stage. Adults can survive without feeding for two years if necessary.

The ADT is a vector of the bacterium that causes Rocky Mt Spotted fever (RMSF). Typical symptoms include: fever, headache, abdominal pain, vomiting, and muscle pain. A rash may also develop, but is often absent in the first few days, and in some patients, never develops. The incidence of RMSF in the US has increased noticeably over the past 10 years. However, according to the Centers for Disease Control, the incidence in Kentucky (and Ohio) is low (0.2 to 1.5 cases per million residents). It is greater in our other neighboring states.

A toxin from the ADT can cause tick paralysis in dogs and occasionally small children. This can occur when ticks attach at on the neck or base of the skull. Full recovery usually occurs within 1 to 3 days after removal of the tick. It is important to check yourself, children, and dogs when in and leaving areas where ticks are or may be active.

They didn't meet the goal but will keep trying

the crowd got a surprise, unscheduled performance: a big windstorm that swept through the crowd, ending the night early.

Taylor said they were keeping an eye out on the radar and thought any storms would go north, but they were wrong.

Tammy Miller, left, receives a survivor medallion from Hannah Adkins Saturday at the Hancock County Relay for Life. Miller was diagnosed with breast cancer.

"We actually got a little bit of warning. Our ACS rep had called us from the other side of Lewisport saying the wind was coming and we had about ten minute warning to try to start getting things torn down," she said.

"Things were blowing everywhere, tents were flying," said Cindy Payne, who oversaw the sale of the luminaries. "There were some younger children there and I just told them to go into the school because you didn't know how bad it was going to be. It scared them once Hancock Bank's tent blew upside down," she said.

"We were very relieved that no one got hurt," said Taylor, "Because it was a little scary there for a little while because it was such a strong wind."

Volunteers this year were: Lorri Oliver, registration; Cindy Payne and Belinda Moffett, luminaries; Sherry Lassaline and Dawana Poyner, accounting; Shanda Willard and Noel Quinn, entertainment; Karen Bolin, sponsorship; Karen Husk, Abbye Hodskins and Brenda Freyvogel, survivors; Lisa Mersch, online; Ralph Dickerson, publicity; Tim, Jacob and Jared Taylor, logistics.

Sponsors were Hancock Clarion, Domtar, Aleris Rolled Products and Southwire.

Taylor would also like to thank the city of Lewisport for use of their stage, Rare Breed for use of their sound system, the county and Judge McCaslin for the trash cans and disposal of trash, and the Hancock County School Board for use of their facilities.

Pam Rice Family loses home to fire

"He knew she meant as much to me as my kids did," she said.

Rice originally got Sable, or "Feefee," by rescuing her from the road. Now she had been rescued twice.

Despite losing her home, and not having any insurance, Rice is trying to remain upbeat.

"It's been hell but I'm trying to have an open mind about it. I'm trying to cut up and crack up every once in a while because if I don't I'm going to cry."

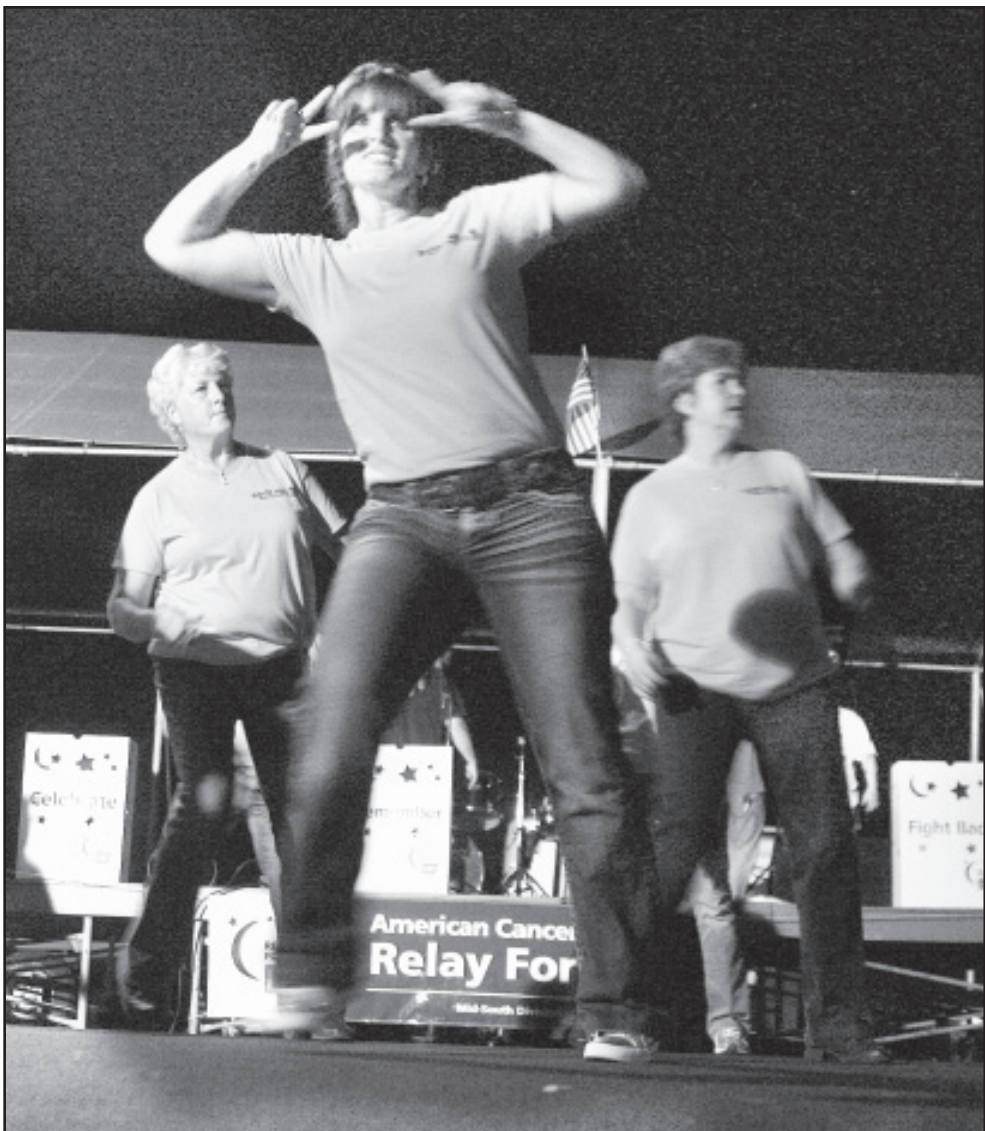

She likes to stick it to the kids a little at the same time.

"I told the kids to clean the house up a little bit you know, but they didn't have to burn it down," she said.

For anyone wanting to offer assistance to the family, their clothing sizes are: for Pam, 20/22 pants, 2XL shirts and a 9 1/2 shoe; for Autumn, size 24 pants, 3XL tops and size 11 shoes; Damian, 30x32 pants, boys XL shirts and size 14 shoes. Pam's fiance lost most of his belongings as well and wears a 3XL shirt, 44x34 jeans and size 15 shoes, and Autumn's boyfriend, who was staying the night and lost many of his clothes, wears 38x30 pants, XL shirt and a 9 1/2 or 10 shoe.

The family also requests no trespassing on the property to protect their remaining belongings.

Steamboat celebrations to mark 200th anniversary

working on reviving the Steamboat Festival for some time.

"We would like to have a steamboat festival as soon as we can get some interest, get a committee," she said. "This being the 200th year is a good time to do it."

"It might not happen, but we're going to make an effort," Stephens said.

"We will be doing lots of things throughout this year and we want Hawesville to come on board and be a part of this celebration," said Parrish.

"It was the steamboat that transformed many small communities and villages along the river," he said. "Actually the steamboat was influential in transforming those to growing cities."

Hawesville has a long history with the steamboat, with several boats being built right here on the river, but it also has a tie to what is arguably the most famous steamboat in history, the Robert E. Lee.

The owner of that boat, John W. Cannon, was born in Skillman Bottoms near Hawesville. He is the man who piloted the Robert E. Lee to victory in 1870 over the Natchez, previously known as the fastest steamboat, racing up the Mississippi River from St. Louis, Mo., to New Orleans, La.

Cannon kept his boat light by carrying no load or passengers, and pressed on through fog to beat the Natchez by about three hours, Parrish said. The contest became a media event that became known as the Great Steamboat Race.

Franklin Meserve, who builds miniature ships and had several on display at the breakfast, told the crowd that Cannon at one time owned more steamboats than anyone in the U.S., and had been the youngest steamboat pilot on the Ohio River.

America at its peak had more than 14,000 steamboats on the water, Parrish said.

Today, however, steamboats are a novelty, and for the first time since that first trip in 1811, there is no form of overnight travel on the Ohio or Mississippi.

Belle Coming to Hawesville

Stephens, for her part, is doing what she can to put a steamboat in Hawesville's piece of the Ohio River, if only for a night.

She has contacted the Belle of Cincinnati and they will be docking at Hawesville boat dock November 11, 2011, available for dinner cruises or just sight seeing.

If she can't get a festival she will at least get a boat, she said, but she's still wanting the festival too.

"We need to promote Hawesville, and that's one thing you do to promote Hawesville, is bring events to the city."

Headlines of the past

50 years ago

Fifty years ago someone robbed the Boutcher Ashland Service Station in Hawesville. Neighbor Derwood Cheek noticed the front door to the station standing ajar, and called owner Leroy Boutcher to report it. Boutcher rushed to the station, and discovered about $40, 10 carton of cigarettes, three recapped tires and four inner tubes missing. Law enforcement arrived on scene to investigate, and discovered someone made entrance to the building by breaking a pane of glass in the service room, and propping up the window. Then the person climbed through the window, took the items and exited by the front door.

25 years ago

Twenty-five years ago Hancock County Middle School Principal Jim Lacy retired. Lacy worked for the school system for 25 years, 13 of them as a principal. As a teacher, he taught social studies, U.S. History and Geography. Lacy said he decided to retire to go fishing, do gardening and pursue other projects around his home.

10 years ago

Ten years ago the community turned out to pay final respects to longtime Wildlife Conservation Officer Jim Gregory. While in the hospital for a heart bypass operation, his stomach ulcer ruptured and spread infection throughout his body. Medical authorities put him in a medically induced coma to help fight the situation, but he eventually succumbed to the infection. At his funeral, approximately 40 fellow conservation officers took turns manning an honor guard at the casket during the visitation ceremony. Approximately 240 people attended the funeral service, and lined the walk from Taylor-Raymond Funeral Home in his honor when being taken to the Hearse.

Auditor has suggestions to improve Hawesville accounting

By Ralph Dickerson

Bill Tichenor of Tichenor and Associates appeared before the Hawesville City Council Tuesday evening, June 7 to report on preliminary findings on the 2009 audit report. He said the preliminary findings point to problems with the bookkeeping process followed in the past by the city.

"I've talked to the mayor about some issues that have come up," Tichenor said. "They are not related to fraud or anything like that."

Tichenor stressed that the former clerks did record all checks and transfers in the accounting system, and no problem with money exists. The problem deals with where exactly the clerks recorded the information. He said too often the past clerks did not enter the information in a way the auditors want the information recorded.

As an example he mentioned a debt payoff. The former clerks put the entire amount in one fund. Tichenor said auditors want the principal in one account, and the interest in another account.

"We are concerned about the way things are posted," Tichenor said. "Are they posted in the right fund?"

Council member Wayne Herndon quizzed Tichenor about the accounting system the city recently purchased to record such information. He wanted to know if a problem existed with it.

"This system we have now, can a city clerk take care of it, or is it too complicated?" Herndon asked.

Tichenor said he did not know much about the accounting system, but he said the important thing is knowing where to put the information in the system, not how to operate the system.

"Whoever you hire, unless they have a four-year accounting degree, they are going to have to be trained in these different funds," he said.

Herndon said the former city auditor recommended

Forestry License Plate now available

A special license plate is now available promoting forestry in Kentucky. The plate has already been approved by the state and the association is in the process of collecting the 900 forms required for the plate to be made. The plate was complimentary designed by Kirby Stephens, Kirby Stephens Design (www.ksdweb.com). The plate will promote forestry while raising funds for Log a Load for Kids and the William H. Steele Scholarship Fund. If you have any questions or would like to obtain an order form please contact the KFIA Office at (502) 695-3979.

the city purchase the system, and provided the clerks the training to operate the system. Tichenor said being taught how to enter information into the system is different than being taught where in the system a person needs to put the information. He said regardless of the system used, city clerks need to be trained not only how to enter the information into a system, but also in which funds the information needs to go.

vice in a given area,” he said. “That 69 tower, we know, there’s plenty of people around there who want it and it’s going to reach a good number of them. And it’s not a question of would we get customers on it, it’s more a question, at this point at least, of whether that’s the place to spend the money or whether there are better places that would get even more bang for the buck. Think of it that way, it is a bang for the buck question.”

“The best I can tell you about 69 is we’re optimistic and working on it but I can’t say it’s on the schedule yet,” he said.

“There’s not enough money to cover everybody in the county,” said Judge Execute Jack McCaslin. “We’d have to put a tower every half a mile.”

“One of the biggest challenges,” said Q-Wireless General Manager Phil Lambert, “is affordable vertical real estate.”

For a wireless location to be viable, he said, it must be 30 feet higher than the trees surrounding it, must not be in a low area, and importantly, be available for lease.

McCaslin wondered about possibly using coal severance money to purchase their own equipment to speed up the process to get access for the residents on 69, an idea Randolph agreed would help.

“We are nearing that final, let’s say, quarter of the original project funding,” said Randolph. “We think we’ve got enough money to do another eight to twelve towers. There’s probably 20 that we would like to do. That’s why you’ve got to pick the right ones.”

An ear-splitting sucking sound!

If you have been hearing an ear-splitting sucking sound over the past few years, it could well be the federal government siphoning off the wealth of private citizens and businesses to support a vast and growing leisure class of federal employees whose only concern, it seems, is to further augment their perks and privileges at taxpayer expense.

USA Today reports that “At a time when worker’s pay and benefits have stagnated, federal employee’s average compensation has grown to double what private sector workers earn.” While many of our citizens would lay this problem at the feet of the current administration, this problem did not start here.

According to the government’s own figures, as published by the Bureau of Economic Analysis, federal employees now average $123,049 in pay and benefits, private-sector employees make $61,998. That’s a pay gap of $61,415 since the year 2000.

What we have here is a classic case of too many people riding in the wagon and too few pulling it. We have all heard this before, but this is truly a case of “Killing the goose that lays the golden eggs.” It is my privilege to explain why this is happening and the best course of future action. As someone famous has said, “Let me be clear” — I do not fault federal employees for this sad state of affairs.

When any person is working and doing what they think is a good job, they don’t turn down raises and perks. That is just human nature. As human beings, we are constituted in a way that makes us rationalize and justify where we are. “Hey, I am working hard, I deserve it and I have earned it,” is the attitude of most working people. The real villains here are members of Congress and the President who set policy and make the rules.

In principle, it works the same way in the private sector. Who determines who is going to give you a raise? In most cases it’s the consumer or the one buying products and services that make raises possible, and ultimately they must come from profits. Again, because of human nature, it would be nice if we could just give ourselves a raise any time we wanted one. In a very real sense, this is what our politicians have been doing for a long time.

But back to the issue at hand, why federal employees are making off like bandits with too much taxpayer money. Of course, the bottom line is “greed,” and Congress and the President (whoever may be in office) are taking advantage of their position as caretakers of the public treasury. To have a healthy economy where raises are possible for all working people, it is necessary to have balance between the private and public sectors. Private sector jobs are those that provide a useful product or service and continue year after year, so long as they remain competitive and stay in business. Here is the real issue that is important to understand. These jobs are not funded by taxpayers and are the back bone of the American free enterprise system.

Millions of American jobs have gone overseas because of government policy and regulations, and this results in high unemployment. Those jobs are in the private sector, because federal government jobs are doing quite well, thank you, especially in our nation’s capital.

What is the answer? Well, a good place to start would be for our president to fire all those Czars and at least half of his cabinet members, and replace them with people with business experience who have actually met a payroll.

Valedictorians becoming thing of the past

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) School districts in Kentucky are beginning to move away from naming valedictorians for graduating classes.

Instead, districts such as the one in Bullitt County have plans to de-emphasize what could be seen as unhealthy competition and recognize all high achievers.

Dave Marshall, who is Bullitt County’s director of secondary education, told The Courier-Journal that district will begin a new tradition with this year’s freshmen class, who will graduate in 2014.

He said under the new plan students can graduate “summa cum laude” with a grade-point average of 4.25 or higher and “magna cum laude” with a GPA of between 4.0 and 4.24. Students would come up with a system to pick which high achievers speak during the graduation ceremony.

Gentry Collins, 17, who was named valedictorian this year at North Bullitt High, will be one of its last. Collins said she worked toward the achievement for four years by taking advanced placement classes, monitoring her GPA and her class ranking.

“Ever since I started high school, I knew I wanted to be that one person,” Collins said. “I wanted to be the one up there giving that speech.”

The district’s decision to move away from the tradition reflects a growing state and national trend. Other school districts in the state, including Jefferson and Oldham, don’t name only one valedictorian.

Although some students say the competitive rankings motivate them, school officials say the system has become outdated as colleges put less emphasis on them.

“There has definitely been a movement in recent years away from ranking students,” said Mel Riddile, associate director for high school services for the National Association of Secondary School Principals. “The reality is that it’s about half (of high schools) that do and half that don’t anymore.”

In Bullitt County, Marshall said choosing a valedictorian “means you have some kids deciding their classes based off of whether it will mean they can beat so-in-so by a few hundredths of a point. It means you have other kids who are good students but don’t even get considered for valedictorian because they aren’t ready for AP classes.”

In Jefferson County, the district has had a policy for a decade to recognize students with a GPA of 4.0 or higher as valedictorians.

Students like Collins say high school rankings still have relevance. Collins said she received a $500 scholarship from the University of Kentucky for getting top honors at her school and plans to attend this fall to study engineering.

“We still look at class rank, even if some other things like test scores or rigor of courses are generally more important,” said Sandy Copher, director of UK’s academic scholarship office.

The University of Louisville doesn’t give scholarships to valedictorians, said Jenny Sawyer, executive director of admissions. Sawyer said the school is among several that have de-emphasized rank as a way to measure students because being No. 1 can mean different things at different schools.

Some students, though, say the competition has challenged them to do better.

“I think it helped me to know where I stood compared to other students,” Collins said. “I understand wanting to honor more students and trying to take some of the controversy out of naming just one person, but it really pushed me.”

Bullitt Central High School’s two valedictorians, Amanda Cape, 17, and Katie Miller, 18, are best friends.

“For us, it really was more of a healthy competition and it’s neat to know we did it together,” Miller said. “But it is kind of an honor to be a valedictorian and be recognized so I think that it’s good to try to include more people in that. I’m just glad that we still get to have the honor before they change it.”

WORDS FROM THE WHITE HOUSE

Bob White
Pastor, Lewisport Baptist Church

Dr. David Jeremiah tells a story from the American Revolution about a pastor named Peter Miller. In his town in Pennsylvania there was another man named Michael Whitman, an evil minded individual who ridiculed Pastor Miller at every opportunity. When it was discovered that Whitman was guilty of treason against the American army, General Washington condemned him to die. Pastor Miller, upon hearing the news, traveled 70 miles on foot to ask his friend, George Washington to spare the life of Whitman. "No Peter," the leader said, "I cannot spare the life of your friend."

"My friend?" Miller asked in amazement. "He is not my friend." He is the bitterest enemy I ever had!" Washington was so taken aback by Pastor Miller's kindness and mercy he showed toward his enemy, that he granted the request and spared the life of the traitor.

The temptation to retaliate, to use unkind words, and to withhold love from those who mistreat us in an ever present reality. Yet Jesus said in Matthew 5:44, to "love your enemies, bless those who curse you, do good to those who hate you and pray for those who spitefully use you and persecute you."

So, loving one's enemies is not an impossible task - it can be done. Just not in our human strength and ability. Only those who have been reconciled to God, and formerly were His enemies can find sufficient motivation to love those who hate them.

A close look at the Lord's words in Matthew 5:44 points to three responsibilities all in the form of verbs (action words) we have to love those who hurt and disappoint us. The first is to "bless those who curse you". We bless them through acts of grace (giving them what they don't deserve) and mercy (withholding what they do deserve). The result according to Paul in Romans 12:20 is that we "heap coals of fire on their head", meaning we shame them into contrition.

A second responsibility is to "do good to those who hate you." Instead of doing all the bad things your fleshly nature thinks of, do something good. Jesus further instructed us "to pray for those who spitefully use you and persecute you." It's a fact, you cannot pray "Lord bless so-and-so, the one I hate so much!" Such an attitude is impossible.

Feelings of hurt and frustration because people have been mistreated are prevalent today. The natural human response is to seek to get even; but the call of Christ is to a higher way of life. If positive feelings ever come toward your enemy, it will be after we act lovingly toward them, not before.

Noah's Ark theme park gets go-ahead in Kentucky

By ROGER ALFORD
Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky A Bible-belt state hoping to land a biblical theme park that includes a full-size replica of Noah's Ark approved tax incentives Thursday to help pay for it.

The Kentucky Tourism Development Finance Authority voted unanimously to grant more than $40 million in tax rebates for the $172 million project that's otherwise being financed by a group of unidentified private investors.

"This was the last real hurdle for us as far as I'm concerned," said Mike Zovath, co-founder of the Answers in Genesis ministry that previously built the Creation Museum in Kentucky.

The latest project would include a replica of the Tower of Babel, a first century village, theaters, lecture halls, retail shops, restaurants, a petting zoo and live animal shows featuring giraffes and elephants.

Zovath said he expects groundbreaking in August, and the project will take 3 years to complete.

Rob Hunden, a consultant who reviewed the proposal for the Tourism Development and Finance Authority, said the project is expected to draw nearly 1.4 million visitors a year, and may require the state to widen the Interstate 75 interchange at Williamstown at an additional cost to the state of about $11 million.

Hunden's projection on visitor numbers was significantly lower than Zovath's original estimate last year of 1.9 million.

Gov. Steve Beshear has said he favors tax incentives for the ark park that is projected to create 600 to 700 full-time jobs and have an economic impact of more than $250 million in its first year of operation.

The mission of the project, Zovath said, is to lend credence to the biblical account of a catastrophic flood and to dispel doubts that Noah could have fit two of every kind of animal in an ark.

Investors, who have looked at sites across the country for the proposed theme park, settled on the Kentucky site that is within a day's drive of two-thirds of the nation's population.

However, the notion of providing such incentives for a project with a religious theme drew immediate opposition on grounds of church-state separation and raised the specter of protracted legal battles over the issue.

Americans United for Separation of Church and State executive director Barry W. Lynn criticized Kentucky's decision, saying the state "should not be promoting the spread of fundamentalist Christianity or any other religious viewpoint."

"Let these folks build their fundamentalist Disneyland without government help," he said.

The Creation Museum has shown that tourists will flock to biblical attractions. More than 1 million visitors have visited the creation museum since it opened more than 3 years ago.

Lynn complained Thursday that public officials in Kentucky are subsidizing fundamentalist religion at a time when they should be promoting modern science for Kentucky children.

"This misguided project deserves to sink," he said.

Zovath said the controversy generated by critics like Lynn has actually been good for the project.

"The more they try to paint us in a bad light, the more opportunities we have to explain the project," he said.

The Salt of the Earth

You are the “salt of the earth,” “worth your salt,” and when in you’re in authority, “above the salt.” These statements were derived from the Bible, and connote that salt is good until it loses its effectiveness as in Matthew 5:13, “You are the salt of the earth, but if the salt loses its saltiness, how can it be made salty again?” While these are positive statements about salt, all references to salt are not. In fact, during the Middle Ages, salt was spread on the earth to poison it as a punishment to landowners who had transgressed against society in some way. Today salt can be a kind of poison to our bodies in the same way if ingested in excessive amounts.

Salt or sodium is necessary in order for our bodies to function properly. According to the Mayo Clinic, sodium helps to maintain the right balance of fluids in your body, helps transmit nerve impulses, and influences the contraction and relaxation of muscles. Your kidneys are the key component in regulating your sodium levels. If your kidneys have trouble regulating your sodium, fluid retention and increased blood pressure result. When these conditions become frequent, they can lead to heart disease, stroke, kidney disease, and congestive heart failure.

So how much is too much sodium? The 2010 Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend less than 2,300 milligrams per day. This sounds like a lot until you consider that one teaspoon of salt has 2,325 milligrams of sodium. If you are 51 years of age or older, you should limit your sodium to less than 1,500 milligrams per day. The average American consumes about 3,400 milligrams, which makes me wonder if we are truly becoming the salt of the earth, or at least the ‘walking’ salt of the earth.

As Americans, our sodium comes from three main sources: processed and prepared foods, natural sources, and additions during cooking or eating. The vast majority of our sodium comes from processes or prepared foods like bread, prepared dinners like pasta, meat, and egg dishes, pizza, cold cuts, bacon, and soups, and fast foods. Foods like vegetables, dairy products, meat, and shellfish have a naturally occurring amount of sodium. For example, one cup of low-fat milk has 107 milligrams of sodium. Then, there’s the salt we add to our foods as we’re cooking them or sitting at the table eating them and condiments add a significant amount, too. For example, one tablespoon of soy sauce has 1,000 milligrams of sodium, which is nearly half of our daily recommended intake.

Are we doomed to be the salt of the earth or can we do something to eliminate our risks for heart, stroke, and kidney conditions? First and foremost, check those labels! When shopping at the market, check labels on packaged foods. Try to select foods with less than 200 milligrams of sodium per serving, being mindful of how many servings you may actually eat at one sitting. Opting for low-sodium foods and limiting your use of condiments will make a difference, as will using herbs and spices to enhance your foods.

He is a beautiful boy with dark rich colors. Clyde is looking for someone to help him out of the shelter. He is a great dog and would make a great outside pet for a family.
